2. Since the debate about euthanasia is still taking place, and since using the present tense creates a sense of immediacy between interlocutors, I recommend you change stanzas 1-4 & 14 from the past tense to the present tense. For example: You say it is the humane thing to do For those condemned to "to endless pain and strife," wished, nay so I have striven, to write; with what success let others judge. The second notion, alluded to above, is more specific and precise, and cannot be so easily dismissed. This does not object to poetry, but to the poem, as regards the subject chosen, and asserts that no poem of any length, that is of the epic nature, can be really great or interesting, unless the event of which it treats be distant and remote, in time at least, if not also in place. These two volumes list late-and mid-Victorian poets, with brief biographical information and bibliographical details of published works. The major strength of the works is the 'discovery' of very many minor poets and their work, unrecorded elsewhere.

Focusing on nineteenth-century attempts to locate the northwest passage, the essays in this volume present this quest as a central element of British culture.
