Skoda Fabia 1.0 MPI SE Drive 5dr 2020 Review | What Car?

Our pick of the range is the 95PS 1.0-litre petrol, which is perky and responsive yet still very efficient returning official economy of 64.2mpg. Although none of the engines are particularly exciting, and the Fabia isn't a fun car to drive, it is quiet and comfortable, both in town and on the motorway.

Skoda Fabia petrol engines. The entry-level 1.0-litre MPI version produces 60hp and 95Nm of torque, good for 0-62mph in 16.4 seconds and a top speed of 98mph. It's cheap to buy and run but quite slow in most situations. It's unlikely to delight more enthusiastic drivers and we'd consider either the more powerful 95hp 1.0-litre TSI turbo petrol.
