The Social God is an ambitious academic text. In seeking to explore the relationship between the Trinity, our notions of self, and the Imago Dei, Grenz covered a lot of ground. Briefly, he discusses numerous theologians from Irenaeus to Calvin to Barth to Moltmann.

The Social God and the Relational Self by Stanley J. Grenz

God is without passions. God does not love or hate anyone. For God is not affected by any emotion of pleasure or pain. . . He who loves God cannot endeavour that God should love him in return. [Ethics V.17-19] God is forgiving. Like omniscience, forgiveness is a necessary component of a judging God if he is to enforce norms and religious beliefs.

God and society: the imaginary divine attributes

The social gospel was a movement among Christians in the late 19th and early 20th centuries that focused on people's welfare, often over their need for the gospel. Some of its major leaders included Richard T. Ely, Josiah Strong, Washington Gladden, and Walter Rauschenbusch. Their teachings de-emphasized salvation, sin, heaven, and hell.

What is the social gospel?

The Social God and the Relational Self is an example of theological construction as an ongoing conversation involving biblical texts, the theological heritage of the Christian tradition, and the contemporary historical/social context. Grenz develops a communal understanding of the imago dei in the face of the demise of the centered self. He delineates the biblical/theological foundation for a new social conception of the divine image and reformulates an understanding of the self in a ...

God and Justice We want every Christian student to pursue the biblical call to social justice. Therefore, a deep understanding of theology and scripture is the foundation for why and how we pursue justice. Social justice is undeniably a huge theme throughout the Bible. 1 in 10 verses in the synoptic gospels are directly about social justice.

That is our task. We believe our rights come from God, but the care of those rights is up to us. It is significant to observe that countries with more religious freedom have more peace. Our small actions each day add up to build social trust, strengthen friendship among society, and ensure that we defend each other's religious freedom.

The social trinitarianism is a Christian interpretation of the Trinity as consisting of three persons in a loving relationship, which reflects a model for human relationships. The teaching emphasizes that God is an inherently social being. Human unity approaches conformity to the image of God's unity through self-giving, empathy, adoration for one another, etc. Such love is a fitting ethical likeness to God, but is in stark contrast to God's unity of being. Those who are often associated with th
